because not everyone that has this car is into the waving bit, so it ends up seeming like the only rule for waving is non-reciprocation – if you wave at someone, it's almost guaranteed they won't wave back - I've ignored thousands of people waving at me, blankly staring at them as they flap by then sticking my hazards on 20 seconds too late as recompense. Also, because it's basically a van, I've watched dozens of electricians briefly wonder why some grinning imbecile they've never seen before is trying to get their attention at a combined speed of 100 mph.

Because these front pages seem to be some sort of sermon, and it's ended up being my turn, I'm tenuously attempting to draw a comparison between this community of disjointed but cheerful vanwavers, and the disparate but cohesive community of the five villages this magazine reaches. Some of us came here because it made sense for a job or they like green villages with pubs, cow poo and small cities nearby. Some of us were born here, some recently, some 100 years ago. Others might have accidentally moved to Dorset and then changed their minds. However it happened, we're all here, wave if you want, pull over into a layby and talk about upgrades, get together in a church, at a big party in a field or on a stage and swap spare parts, or keep yourself to yourself and smile at the wavers. People are strange when you're a stranger.

T alking of upgrades, Charles gets his new luxury chair this month on the 6th - see pages 15 and 16 for info on a special village lunch and celebratory service. Try out Coronation Chicken 12 different ways and some Royal Pudding, whatever that entails, probably cocktail sausages too!

Longford Estate News

May 2023

The past three months are best described as wet, it seems that the rains won't ever stop! Having said that the river levels have dropped and the rivers are closer to summer levels than they should be, this could be the result of the floods earlier in January scouring out the river bed and removing the weed which helps to hold up the levels.

The farm team are eager to get on the ground and get spring crops planted, just when we think there is a gap in the weather the rains start again, preventing us from doing any field work. With only 7% of our spring crops drilled by 4 April, albeit germinated and up, the team managed to get us up to 51% drilled by 9 April. We are hopeful that next weeks forecast is correct and the April showers hold off so we can get the rest of the crop in.

The cows are due to start calving on 6 April, there's always one that's early and 'Big Mac' was born three weeks early but is thriving. Three new bulls have been purchased to bring the team up to full capacity in readiness for July, they have been introduced to the rest of the team which is always a daunting time as they find their place within the herd.

We continued working with Wiltshire Wildlife Conservation Volunteers completing some more conservation work on Clearbury Down and on the Grims Ditch in Great Yews. A poor and dilapidated hedgerow that had a number of dead tree stands along the Homington Road was coppiced. Over the next couple of years this will now grow into a stronger hedge that will provide real benefit to wildlife and we will manage it accordingly.

Our trout hatchery at Bowerchalke has adapted well to our change in production methods, fry from the site are now moved at 40-45g rather than 20-25g. Being larger and a bit more robust they are better suited to entering the larger RAS system at Barford as a result growth rates are superior. We were pleased to start supplying a new customer in February.

The river team are preparing for the annual stocking of brown trout into various stretches of the river. These fish have been reared in-house and look tremendous so should provide some good sport for our fishing syndicate.

The woods team delivered almost 600 log orders this year and are about to embark on the spring workload of checking young trees and weeding plantations.

We have had a number of houses come back to us since the beginning of the year as tenants have gone onto the property ladder and changes in occupation and location. The property rental market remains strong and interest in our properties continues to be high, rental properties are often let on the first or second viewing.

The year's National Gallery tours of the Castle have started and all 2023 dates are sold out. The visitors book has many glowing references for the guides and the high standards they maintain.

Community News

Post Easter News and Notes, May is here and things are heating up in the five villages and beyond. Your news has been idling in and we are delighted to get it into this edition. As always apologies if we have not included your news, we are News and Notes limited.

High Road to Help

News just in from Britford in celebration of everyone's favourite neighbour and local hero Malcom Hitchens who has taken amazing care of The High Road since the start of the pandemic. Trimming back the soil that had been encroaching on the path, keeping the hedges tidy and clear of rubbish and hazards as well as continuing to take care of the village. A rapturous thank you Malcom and other Britfordians for all you do!

Obituary

It is with great sadness that via Hatty Hillier we announce that Sue Moncrieff died peacefully on 14th April aged 83, leaving a son Andrew, a daughter Mary, and 2 grandchildren. The family was resident at Presses House, Nunton 1975 -1983. Enquiries Hatty Hillier 01722 324 788.

Horatio's Garden does Chelsea Flower Show

Stepping into the mix this month for people who are free and keen on Sunday 4th June 10am-2pm, is Horatio's Garden charity who will be hosting a special plant sale, with the Longford Estate, featuring RHS Chelsea Flower Show Main Avenue garden. "A variety of stunning rare and large perennials, grass species and unusual hydrangeas and roses" are all signed up so don't miss out.

Poultry Cross, Pigeons not

The Poultry Cross in Salisbury has reopened, the pigeons are delighted. However on the final inspection of said Cross, the structural engineer located a previously undetected issue with a stone pinnacle located above the damaged buttressing pier, pigeon's less delighted. Temporary strapping has been installed at the rear of the pinnacle. Pigeons cheer. Further repairs necessary but the monument can now be enjoyed. Pigeons and humans rejoice.

Bish Bash Bosh

Dr Ian Smith of Bishopstone, tells us that there are many lovely things going on in Bishopstone, for instance the Annual Spring fair taking place on the 20th May 10am-12pm at the Bishopstone Village Hall. This is just one of the plethora activities Bishopstone has on offer, please see website for more details.

EbbleSwag

As a request for a few donations - they need bottles for the barrow of booze, fresh produce for the WI stall, and plates etc for the crockery smash please. Should you find yourself in possession of all or some of these things please make yourself known to one of the committee Elders.

Getting to know your community

Terry & Jen

Terry moved to Nunton aged nineteen when his dad became the Dairyman at Nunton Farm. It was then that he met Jen, who had lived in Nunton since she was five. They married in July 1966 and moved into their house in Bodenham. They have two children.

"I've still got the dress," Jen told me. "I used to work at the village shop, in the Radnor Arms. Bob and Kelly ran the pub and she paid for my wedding dress and took me down to Bournemouth for fittings. We used to go for a day out on the bus."

What struck me was how hard they had both worked. Among other jobs Jen was a chocolate maker, a dinner lady and Home Help for the council. Terry's jobs included Nunton Farm, Great Yews and the Tannery. He'd grown up helping his Dad on the farms, first driving a tractor at age ten.

"If Dad ever wanted any help on the farm, Mum used to come to the bottom of the stairs in the morning and call 'Terry, are you getting up?'. She knew I would. I left school and I started work on my sixteenth birthday. You used to carry three and a quarter hundredweight maze or wheat on your back. We used to walk up two steps and drop 'em up in the barn, go down and get the next one and we'd do it all in turn. That was what I was doing the first day I left school."

The way Terry talks about work, it clear that he loved it, despite the long hours and hard work. I asked him if he'd ever wanted to do anything else. The answer was a "No," without hesitation. "You're born to want to do it or you don't. And that's all there is to it."

After a while, our discussion around farming turned to the technical advances of tupperware.

"In winter the old chaps used to take bottles of hot tea then keep it in a sock, to try and keep it warm. You see some of the things today you think, cor, I only wish I had one of they. Even to put your sandwiches in a nice box. Sometimes you'd pick up your sandwiches in hot weather and all the stuff had all gone horrible. You either eat it or you go without. That's the only thing you could do."

"But that was what it was, you didn't know any different." Added Jen.

"Thermos flasks was made of glass weren't they?" Terry continued. "And you could break them by just bumping them. But they brought out these thermos flasks with a hard lining. 'You'd never break it' they said. So I had one. I rolled it over, with the roller, broke it all into little bits."

They told me about how they'd turned their whole garden into a vegetable patch.

"Peas, beans, carrots, onions, beetroot, all the rest of it." Terry said "When one lot was up you plant again, for when that was gone. We never bought nothing, no vegetables. When we went on our honeymoon Dad came down and earthed up me taters. We had a lovely crop that year, didn't we?"

Their first vehicle was a motorbike. "You'd be surprised what you can get in the back of a box, on a motorbike. Lots of shopping." Jen told me.

"Everywhere we wanted to go was on a motorbike. I had a 197 James." Terry said. "We carried a telly home from town one day, in it, didn't we? Went to town, we buy a telly, how are we gonna get that home? So what we done, scrapped the box in the bin, put the telly in, on our coats, tied the lid down."

And this is where I leave you, with the gorgeous image of Terry and Jen; newlyweds in the 60s, with a telly strapped to their motorbike, happily riding home to Bodenham. — Anna Harriott, Co-Editor

Focus on Food

May - Fat and Acid!

Trealise I'm probably a bit late to the party, but I've just started watching 'Salt, Fat, Acid, Heat' on Netflix www.saltfatacidheat.com. It's a fascinating series, presented by Samin Nosrat and explores the key elements of good cooking. She's clearly passionate, as are all the cooks and chefs who she's lined up to share their recipes and techniques, so well worth watching. Last night was all about Fat, but in a good way, and how it carries flavour, transporting the tastebuds, intoxicating the recipients. And quite often, I do find the fat to be the best bit, think belly pork, crispy bacon or a jamon Iberico de Bellota. I was completely transfixed watching the creation of handmade parmesan and focaccia by artisans in Italy and although I'd just eaten, I was starving by the end of the program.

I say I'm late to the party, I bought the book of the same name, by the same author about 4 years ago www.amazon.co.uk/Salt-Fat-Acid-Heat-Mastering/. To quote the back cover 'An instant kitchen classic, Salt, Fat, Acid, Heat just might be the last cookbook you'll ever need. By demystifying these four elements of good cooking, Samin Nosrat will give you the confidence and instincts to unshackle yourself from the tyranny of always following recipes and make you a cook for life.'

She goes into some detail, the first 40 pages are all about salt, where it comes from, how to use it and when. Basic stuff you would think, but I learned so much new stuff about these magical crystals, so I would say, even after 50 years of passionate cooking, it's never too late to learn and you can teach an old dog new tricks. Half the book is about the above 4 topics, with the second half full of juicy recipes, with which to practice your new found artistry, even though, of course, you no longer need a recipe.

I seem always to need a recipe, I'm shackled to them, occasionally wandering off piste, but there are so many fantastic chefs and recipes to learn from. Here's one I found recently, from one of my favourite chefs, Nieves Barragan Mohacho. She's a Michelin star chef, her restaurant is an absolute must to visit www.saborrestaurants.co.uk The recipe I found online, I was looking to recreate an amazing bean dish I had eaten a few years ago in Lisbon, Portugal, this was the closest I got to it https://www.thehappyfoodie.co.uk/recipes/arrocina-beans-with-chorizo-morcilla-and-pork-belly/

PRIVATE DINING

Twice a year we open Longford Farmhouse for our 'Cooking the Books' supper clubs and feed 60 lucky locals a four-course menu of seasonal produce with recipes poached from the pages of our favourite cookbooks. Occasionally, when asked, we cook for locals or non-locals who want to celebrate something special whilst sharing exquisite dishes with family and friends. Here's some recent feedback.

'My family took me to Longford Farmhouse to celebrate my birthday, with four old school friends and their wives. The twelve of us hugely enjoyed splendid food, with great service, in a very comfortable, attractive setting. It was a wonderful treat. I discovered later that we had been able to supply our own wine, with no corkage to pay, which was a bonus. Thank you Bread and Flowers for a truly memorable evening. Adrian Taylor'

EbbleFest: 1.30pm to 11:30pm

"Bring back the fete!" you said.

"We want more things for the children to do" you said.

EbbleFest is listening. This year the fete returns, the Village Olympics are reinstated (with a prehistoric twist!), and of course all the familiar favourites including; The Big Bar, food stalls, artisan coffees, bouncy castle, Grand Prize Draw, Barrow of Booze, Tractor Trailer rides, and much more. The more includes our very own Mediaeval Villagers, illustrating aspects of village life but not as we remember it! The historic action extends to mediaeval archery and Felix the horse, who will demonstrate ancient techniques used by Knights preparing for battle. Oh, and there will be music. Lots of live music. Local talent and firm favourites Break Cover return to headline.

Rally the family, bring the neighbours and the dog! Pack your deck chairs, picnic blankets and pocket money, it is going to be a banger.

Plant of the Month

May Aquilegia

I remember the first time I saw an Aquilegia. I was about seven years old, in Johannesburg. My Dad, who was a master at capturing the imaginations of his ten children, called me out to the garden to see this beautiful flower that he said looked like a little jester's hat. Columbine he called it. I remember being entranced by this incredibly alien looking thing in front of me - the flower, not my father (although we did wonder sometimes). Imagine my delight at finding it again 5,600 miles and eighteen years later when it was reintroduced to me as Aquilegia. To my surprise I learned it was thought of by many as a plant not far removed from a weed; out on parole for good behaviour but best kept an eye on. I understand the misgivings, anything that can self seed with such ferocity and grow with such tenacity needs keeping in its place. For me I admire its spirit. Any plant that can be uprooted and moved to basically anywhere is something I want in my garden.

When you find it somewhere you weren't planning on (and you decide you absolutely must move it) then instead of it going in the green bin, consider planting it somewhere nothing else could thrive. When we realise that there are incredibly beautiful plants that can grow where nothing else can, we can turn even the most inhospitable area into a garden. Similarly, when you find them growing next to your bin or round the back of your greenhouse, consider moving them into the flowerbed. They've repaid their debt to society, all is forgiven. Welcome back.

T hey like full sun or partial shade, and are medium sized, so sit comfortably mid flower bed. When they have finished flowering either cut back the stems to try and stop them seeding or bend the stems over once they've died and dried out to aid the process. I love the sheer variety you can get with Aquilegia. From Flabellata to Pink Petticoat, the changes in shape and colour are simply amazing. Perhaps one day I'll make a flower bed with only Aquilegia, a swathe of these incredible shapes and colours, nodding in the wind - ready to capture the imagination of any passing seven year old.

The gardening jobs I'm doing in May (apart from the ever-present weeding) include: Tying in climbers like clematis or wisteria and getting plant supports for things like peonies and delphiniums in place before they get too big. Also now is a good time to repair or add new wires for climbing roses.

Happy gardening!

WI News

WI April Report

n a sunny April morning 35 members gathered in the Radnor Hall to hear the latest news. The president complemented Jane Warner on her lovely white flower arrangement and thanked all the members who had brought offerings for the 'Flower of the month' competition, which was won by Maria Amey with her beautiful Rembrandt tulip offering. Business was brisk with the walking group, book clubs and lunch group discussed. Sally Hadley reminded us to get our skates on and finish any baby hats, baby blankets or trauma teddies on the go as she will make a final collection of them next month. There were many County events on offer: a variety of talks and workshops; an outing to Reading to see a replica 'Bayeux Tapestry'; advance warning of the Annual County Meeting in Swindon in October; a walk from Wootton Rivers in May and a holiday to Valkenburg next April. We were invited to enter a national writing competition or a County craft competition to 'make a hat' – although a little mystified by the 'post entry' instruction - a beret perhaps? Members were asked to make a cake with a royal theme for next month's Cake Stall in aid of ACWW and were informed that the theme of June's Summer Party would be 'The Seaside'. Coffee break followed with many members paying their annual subs, buying national raffle tickets, looking at the bulb catalogues or buying a 'square' on the treasure island map, painted by Hatty Hillier. It was busy.

Our speaker, Gillian Petton, followed with so much information about tulips. Who knew there were so many varieties, and did you know that they used to be valued higher than gold. She entitled her talk 'Tulips to Turbans' a direct reference to their Ottoman origins. 'Suleiman the Magnificent' was seen wearing a huge turban in the shape of an upturned tulip – he was such a fan! Pottery, tiles, clothing were all to feature this precious flower. Gradually through trade links they filtered into Europe in the 16th century and eventually became the bulb fields we know today in Holland and East Anglia. Fabrics, wallpapers, paintings and ceramics still use stylized designs dating back to Ottoman times and who can forget the 'tulip skirt'!

Our next meeting is on May 15 th when we will discuss the national resolution and enjoy hearing 'the Stitching Witch' talking about the history of corsetry – ow!!

Church News

News from the Pews

Lent, Holy Week and Easter are behind us, almost in the blink of an eye. Whatever we gave up in Lent we can enjoy again. Grateful thanks to all the folk who decorated both our churches so beautifully for our Easter celebrations. As we move into May, we look forward to the Coronation of King Charles and the community gatherings that will occur. Services are a bit erratic this month and we encourage you to check with the Church Services page of News and Notes. For those who can travel and would like to visit St Martin's church in Fifield Bavant, there will be an Ascension Day service in this lovely tiny chapel on 18th May at 12 noon.

WATCH THIS SPACE. We are hoping to start a monthly (or more frequent if well received) tea/coffee and cake morning or afternoon with, maybe, board games and definitely chat! All ages welcome, probably in the Barker Room. More news next month. Please let us know if we can do anything to make your lives better.

Best wishes from your churchwardens
