Touchstones of Spirituality 2

Last month I did not explain the title of my 'thought for the month'. I ought to do so. There are (according to research) five areas of human life that are fruitful for spirituality: they are known as the touchstones of spirituality. Whether you believe in (a or more) g/God(s) or not, these are areas where most people can experience something more or other than themselves; where there is energy, inspiration or even ecstasy. As a Christian I would say these are "thin places" where we meet God. The five areas are:

- ✓ Creativity: music, art, cooking, making, inventing, designing and a lot of other things.
- ✓ Community: when people meet together and feel they belong.
- ✓ Nature: relationship with the natural world in gardens, pets, walks and 100 other ways.
- ✓ Faith: this is your worldview even if it is not religious and does not include god. For example as a Christian I think that we can get to know what God is like by looking at Jesus.
- ✓ Practice: it can be religious practice like going to church at Christmas. It can also be moral practice in what values you think are important (patience, courage or faithfulness) and how you think we should treat each other.

As I am getting to know people here and meet and walk and talk with you these are the areas of life I am interested in. Looking forward to meet and talk more.

Shalom (= both peace and wellbeing) Anna-Claar
